INVOCATION

Chair Bell called upon Commissioner Baydoun, who introduced Reverend Tim Marvil of Allen Park Presbyterian Church, who gave the following invocation:

"We gather here today, and first, we give thanks for the freedoms that we live under that allows us to have liberty and to prosper. There are areas of the world where this is not possible, and we are grateful, dear God, for your provisions, so that we can do this. And as we gather, we find our County in a midst of a continuing pandemic. This is a disease that has horribly impacted so many for almost one year now. We mourn the lives lost and pray for healing for those who are affected. We give you thanks for your gifts and talents and wisdom that has allowed effective vaccines to be produced in record time, and we pray for a continued blessing that they will be made available to all in a rapid timeframe. We mourn the loss of community that we have felt due to the necessary precautions, and we yearn for the time to come soon when we may embrace each other once again. We thank you for the great diversity that can be found in our communities. Wayne County is home to so many of different ethnicities, races, backgrounds and traditions, and sometimes it's easy to forget how wonderful and beautiful diversity is. With this diversity, also comes the many ways that your people recognize and worship you over the years. So, as this prayer ends, we thank you our God, Allah, Yahweh, Jehovah, Father Abba for bringing us together this day so that we can continue to provide and make life better for all. We thank you for calling all of our public officials and workers to a life of service. We pray you will guide our esteemed Commissioners today as they take up the ordinary and extraordinary business that confronts them today. May your grace, peace and love be reflected in their proceedings. We pray this all in your name, Amen."
